

Biscuit to the Rescue

One might not think of Biscuit as being a “Superhorse” but she did do a “Heroic Act” the other day. She rescued Kit, a young two year old from a mad horse, Dreamin. Biscuit rescued Kit from a lot of pain and misery, if not as she believes certain death!!

OK so maybe I’m exaggerating a Little bit. But Biscuit did do a surprising move to help Kit. (So now you are saying to yourself, Get on with the Story!!!)

The other day, the horses were all standing around inside the barn and near the water trough. Kit, who is a young, energetic ½ Arabian 2 year old, is not liked very well by the rest of the herd. She seems to have a way of bugging them, just by being around. Kit wants to be higher in the pecking order but usually get put back down to the bottom whenever she tries to boss another horse around. So now every time Kit gets too close, the other horses usually just run her off. That is Ok except when the ground is icy and Kit can’t get her feet going in the right direction!

On the day in question, Dreaming was standing kind of close to the water trough when Kit came over. Dreaming was not happy with Kit getting this close so decide to kick Kit. Kit who had the fence and water trough on one side and a kicking Dreamin on the other side tried to move out of the way but her hooves didn’t have any traction on the ice so when Dreamin kick, with both feet, Kit just went down on the ice, flat on her side. Dreamin was furious, she had told Kit to move and instead, Kit laid down! (Not by choice, but that didn’t seem to enter Dreamin’s mind). Dreamin starts to back into Kit, to really give her a lashing when, out of the herd came Biscuit! She ran between Dreamin and Kit, knocking Dreamin out of line with Kit and giving Kit time and room to get up!

Now Biscuit isn’t crazy! After whacking Dreamin in the butt, she kept moving, taking her out of the line of danger and clear out of Dreamin site. As Dreamin turns around to figure out what just happened, Kit stands up and runs out into the open to safety. Kit and Biscuit look at each other but don’t say a word, just a quick look and then on with their normal horse duties, whatever that is, probable looking for morsels of hay.

Biscuits came back into the barn to be petted and praised by all the girls who were standing at the fence watching the show, as if to say, “Yea, I know I did good”. Dreamin stands over by a telephone pole, looks confused and Kit, just wonders around the pasture looking for the next bit of trouble.

Biscuit as of 12/7/2011 has gone to a new home in Steward to use her superhorse powers and create new relationships. Biscuit and her new kids are in the first picture on the page. We will miss Biscuit but believe she will do wonderful in her new home. I’m sure there’s going to be more stories of her Superhorse abilities!!!
